

Hook Yourself Up To Tracking Device

■ In case you keel over in the desert

BY TALIA VELI

Have you ever felt like escaping your mundane life by hopping on a motorcycle and biking down to Baja? Well a guy named Jon did just that; he started in Colorado and decided to ride to Mexico, down through Baja, then take a ferry to the mainland of Mexico and keep on truckin ing them you made it and you're fine. That is assuming you have 10 people in your life who care about where you are and if you are safe.

You can also create a custom message to your friends and family by letting them know you're okay, and combine it with your track

"help" (non-life threatening), "Check-in", "Custom message", "Facebook", "Twitter", "Geocaching.com", and "Spot adventures" for $99. Additional services include "Track progress" for $50 a year, "Type and send" (text messages) $50 for 500 messages, and "GEOS member rescue benefit" (you can upgrade to GEOS for reimbursement of $100K in Search and Rescue expenses. And after a few days of standing there with his arm stuck in a rock, he took out his jack knife and sawed his arm off, and hiked out? True story. Well, if he had had Spot back then, he would have his arm today.

Better go to <http://www.findmespot.com/en/index.php> and click on "where to buy" on the top right corner, because, Bunky, you don't have the stones to saw off your right arm with a jack knife. You would stand there sniffing until you died. You can find a retailer on the website, or you can choose to buy it online. ✎
